*Versatility:

- The apartment can cater to different types of tenants, such as singles, couples, or even small families, depending on the size of the studios.

*Income Potential:

- If you're the owner, renting out each studio separately can potentially generate higher rental income compared to renting out a single, larger apartment.

*Maintenance:

- Easier to manage as each studio is self-contained. Issues in one studio are less likely to affect the others.

*Energy Efficiency:

- Individual heating and cooling systems allow tenants to control their own energy usage, potentially leading to lower utility costs.
